

monitor units. Software like a treatment planning system is then used to compute the dose to the patient for comparison with the intended treatment prescription.